This Institution was organized under a special charter in 1850. The method of treatment adopted is the same as that employed in the best French, English and American hospitals. The attending physician is a regular graduate of the College of Medicine, and without degrading it into empiricism, as is so frequently the case with "foreign" quacks, "former" quacks, and "beneficial associations," he, like Ricord, Giviale, Vidal, Bismuth, &c., has made this branch of Surgery a specialty during the past ten years, and is prepared to give patients as good treatment as they could obtain in Eastern Clinics.

Those afflicted with any of the above diseases, should not fail to delicately enter them, but apply at once, and be cured.

VENEREAL DISEASES.—Particular attention given to all Forme Discretes, such as suppressed, or unhealthy Menstruation, Leucorrhoea, Chlorosis, Discharge of the Womb and Ovary, &c. Also, Agent for Doan's Female Pills, for obstructed Menstruation, price $1 per box.

PUBLISHED DAILY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Office—At the Bridge.

The Catholic Telegraph on the Issues of the Day.

From the Cincinnati Gazette, Oct. 20.

We printed in yesterday's Gazette an able and spirited article from the Catholic Telegraph, reviewing the late political campaign. The same number of that journal contains several minor editorials bearing on the same question, which have the ring of the truth. Perhaps some Democratic politicians hereabouts will read an important lesson in the following:

There are some good people in this community who seem to think that the Catholic Church was instituted for the special benefit of the Democratic party. So firmly has this heresy taken hold on their minds, that they denounce and threaten their brethren who think differently. We advise those persons to practice a little moderation in their language. The Catholics who find fault with others for not voting at the late election for the Democratic ticket, are very much like the Democrats themselves, but they have no authority to condemn the conscience of their fellow citizens. The Catholics who uphold the Union cause do not belong to that class which acts first and thinks afterward. They voted under a deep and sincere sense of their obligation, and that liberty they extend to others they very properly demand for themselves.

There is one step from the sublime to the ridiculous, as some of the Catholics may say there is but one step from freedom to despotism. There are not so full of conceit of their own ability for his master's denounce all who will not vote as they do. Because in a life time those with whom they heretofore agreed in their political convictions, find strong reasons for abandoning their position for a time they take it as a personal insult. One would suppose from the way they talk, and would count them if they had the power. Such persons are in a minority, but unfortunately without physical ability to do mischief.

The Pilot takes great delight in calling the editor of the Telegraph a "negrophile," a "lover of blacks." We supposed yellow or green (backs) is the color for his master.

The Christian prejudice of one race against another is contrary to both faith and charity. It is necessary to maintain that all men are of one blood, and crying to oppress.

Said—To see a Catholic editor trying to find out reasons for driving back into slavery a people who have escaped from their chains.

Is it constitutional to take a white man's life when he fights against our armies in battle? If it is, why is it unconstitutional to take his slave?

Jeff. Thompson on an Epistolary Campaign.

In a recent letter to the editor of the Louisville Journal, Jeff. Thompson, now a prisoner of war at Johnson's Island, thus speaks of some individual who has slandered him:

This person's description of me, is, as he would make me appear, amusing and ridiculous. But it is not so. He should would not retell and speak so of a lady (my wife) whose very traits in the past he would not be worthy to look upon. Should he ever get into my hands I will seal him from the bridge of his nose to the tip of his tail, or close his eyes and make him see the light of day. I will seal him from the bridge of his nose to the tip of his tail, or close his eyes and make him see the light of day. I will seal him from the bridge of his nose to the tip of his tail, or close his eyes and make him see the light of day.

NEWS ITEMS.

—The monthly report of the crops for September has been delayed in consequence of the preparation of important statistical tables. It is now in the hands of the printer. The condition of the fall crops is reported good, though they were somewhat injured by the early frost; corn, in particular, suffering heavily. The tables show that the damage, as carefully ascertained, while not generally as serious as the early reports indicated, is still great in certain sections. The wheat crop harvested is even larger than that of last year.

—The St. Louis Union says that the rebels, during their occupation of Bonville, Mo., stole indiscriminately from Union men and secessionists, carrying away property to the amount of $20,000 from the town and the adjacent country. The County Treasurer had $30,000 in his office, but managed to carry it away before the thieves reached the place. They failed also to break open the safe of Mr. Stephens, a broker, which contained about $15,000. He, however, lost about $300 in horses.

—Col. Berdan has been before the Military Commission, of which Gen. Kicketts is President, and explained the cause of his absence, &c., by satisfactory documentary evidence. The Secretary of War has just sent him leave of absence for sixty days, on surgeon's certificate of disability. Col. Berdan still suffering from hemorrhage caused by his wound.

—The patterns have been made and the preparations commenced at the Fort Pitt Foundry, Pittsburgh, for the casting of a gun which will have a bore of twenty inches. Its length will be twenty feet, and its greatest diameter at the breech five feet four inches. It will weigh about fifty-seven tons.

—The work of apportioning the number of troops to be raised under the last call of the President among the several States and the District of Columbia has been begun at the Provost-Marshal-General's office. The States thus far apportioned, and the number of men to be raised by each is as follows:

Maine	2,723
New Hampshire	2,723
Vermont	2,723
Massachusetts	15,126
Connecticut	4,422
New York	38,208
Delaware	1,136
Indiana	18,797

—Commissioner Ould publishes a notice in the Richmond Dispatch of the 20th, declaring all rebel officers and privates captured previous to the 1st of October, except those captured at Vicksburg on July 14th, to be exchanged. This, that paper states, includes the staffs of the rebel Gen. Pemberton, Steen, Bowen, Moore, Barton, S. D. Lee, Cummings, Harris, and of Col. Reynolds and Dickey, and the officers and men of the engineer corps, and the 4th and 5th Mississippi regiments.

The soldiers consider the Chicago Times on the person a badge of treason, as the following incident will illustrate: A soldier, home on furlough in Illinois, a short time since, met a neighbor with a number of the Times in his hand—asked him if he was a subscriber to that sheet? "Yes." "Then you are worse than Benedict Arnold!" Copperhead withdrew from the discussion of the subject, considering it rather personal in will the illustration.

—United States Senator G. B. Davis is very ill, and slight hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Legal Condition of the Insurgent States.

LETTER FROM ROBERT DALE OWEN.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

Since the opposition papers of this city have seen fit, on sundry occasions of late, to connect my name, among others, with the doctrine that the insurgent States, in virtue of their rebellion, have become extinct as States, being reduced to the condition of territories, divested of Constitution and statute law, perhaps you will allow me to state briefly, and without argument, what are my opinions on this subject.

No public act of the insurgent inhabitants of one or more of the United States, short of a revolution ultimately successful, and permanently establishing a separate and independent power, acknowledged as such by other nations, can take out of the Union, or from under the authority of the General Government or the Constitution, any one of the States comprising the American Union.

But one inhabitant, or all the inhabitants of a State may, by crime, forfeit their political rights. If all the inhabitants of a State, by some general crime, legally imputable to all, forfeit their political rights, there will be no one remaining legally empowered to act under the Constitution of the State or of the United States.

This is the present condition of the inhabitants of the insurgent States. The Court (claimants of Schouwer, brilliant, &c., as United States, March Term, 1861) has decided that these inhabitants, without distinction as to individual loyalty or disloyalty, have, in law, the same rights only as foreign enemies invading the land. No one of them has a legal right to exercise the functions of Governor or Judge or State representative. They have no right to elect a Governor or a member to the State Legislature or to the Congress of the United States. Nor will their political rights revive by a cessation of hostilities for insurgents, or one subdued, do not become innocent in the eyes of the law.

It is true that many of those who, by imputation of law, are thus guilty, are, in intent and voluntary act, really innocent. Through good and through bad reports they have still revered the ancient flag; their hearts have still clung to the old Union. But the law, in its rigidness, knows no sympathetic pity; cannot be turned aside by sentiment. The Union has no truer friend than John Bright; but if Great Britain declared war against the United States, John Bright would be, in the eye of the law, our country's enemy.

As regards the insurgents generally, they are, however, so far in a position of inferiority to the Government, that, as the disabilities in question are in the nature of a penalty resulting from crime, to wit, the crime of treason, they may, in law, be removed (as by pardon) and when they are thus removed, the penalties cease and the constitutional rights revive.

Where this otherwise—were these disabilities permanent and irremediable—there would be no constitutional mode by which the insurgents could recover their lost political rights. It is evident that the Constitution and laws of a State, having no citizens with legal capacity to exercise even the fundamental right of suffrage, would become nullities. But as it is not a permanent suspension of rights which can be legally restored, and which common sense teaches us will be, under some conditions or other, so restored, the case is very different. We see no sufficient argument in proof that anything has occurred to make null and void these Constitutions and laws. In my judgment, they remain, for the present, inoperative, so far as regards the constitutional rights conferred by them; and as soon as the inhabitants of any insurgent State shall, with or without exceptions, recover, by the restoration of their political rights, the State Constitution and laws in pursuance thereof, as they stood previous to secession, will come again into full operation; and the rights of suffrage and other constitutional rights shall be exercised.

It must, however, be borne in mind, that during the present insurrection, laws of the United States have been enacted and proclamations of the President of the United States have been issued, which are binding as part of the supreme law of the land, "anything in the Constitution or laws of the State to the contrary notwithstanding." (U. S. Constitution, Sec. 6.)

It would be an act of national folly to restore to the insurgents their political rights, except upon such conditions as would afford a sufficient guaranty that the above is, and proclamations shall be maintained and obeyed. It would be unavailing to attempt the establishment of permanent civil government in any insurgent State until it is cleared of armed rebels, so that the Federal Courts can hold their sessions, and the people can be opened, without interruption from guerrillas. Until then, Provisional Governments, military or Congressionally appointed, are the only practical form.

But the sooner such temporary expedients, unknown to the Constitution except as the offspring of necessities impermissible from a state of civil war, can be dispensed with the better for the cause of constitutional liberty. It is a rule of international law, that the laws and institutions of a conquered nation, except so far as these are inconsistent with the victor's system of government, shall remain unchanged until legally repealed or modified by the conquering power. This rule is founded upon that consideration of humanity and justice which forbids that there should be suddenly and arbitrarily wrenched, even from a nation that lies at the mercy of the conqueror, the laws and usages to which it has long been accustomed. Still more binding is such a rule upon us, if we shall subvert not a foreign nation but a domestic rebellion. The insurgents, once legally reinvested with their political rights, are, in my opinion, entitled to their constitutional rights and laws, so far as these conform to the present Supreme Law of the land, and so far these can be left to them with a due regard to the general welfare. And such changes as the public safety requires should be made legally and in strict accordance with the Constitution of the United States.

Let us beware how, under circumstances so momentous, we stray from the Constitutional path; every other is the path of danger. In the British subject the most powerful political sentiment is loyalty to his Queen; in the American subject it is veneration for his Constitution. No appeal to that sentiment is ever made among us in vain.

"The Constitution as it is" is no more patent watchword than "the Union as it is." No man can be employed in a political contest, except upon that basis we cannot erect a permanent plan of reconstruction without exposing ourselves to assault from the

The Attack on the Ironsides.

From the Charleston Courier.

A REBEL ACCOUNT.

One of the most daring and gallant exploits of the war, distinguished by the greatest coolness, presence of mind and intrepidity of the strikers, was the attack on the ironclad USS Monitor.

The enterprise, was performed Monday night. This is no less than an attempt to blow up the United States steamer New Ironsides, lying off Morris Island.

Though not fully meeting the expectations of those who conceived the plan, and those who carried it into execution, it has called forth the unbounded admiration of our citizens for the brilliant execution of the actors in their dangerous and patriotic self-sacrificing undertaking.

The torpedo steamer David, with a crew of four volunteers, consisting of Lieut. James H. Cowan, Chief Engineer, and James Sullivan, fireman of the gunboat Chicago, with J. V. Cannon, Assistant pilot of the gunboat Palmetto State, left South Atlantic wharf between 6 and 7 o'clock on Monday evening, for the purpose of running out to the ironclad, exploding a torpedo under the vessel near midships, and if possible, blow her up.

The weather being dark and hazy, a light near the anchorage of the Monitor, for the purpose of running out to the ironclad, exploding a torpedo under the vessel near midships, and if possible, blow her up.

They remained in this position for a short time, circling around the ironclad, and then, at 8 o'clock, the object of their visit. Lieut. Cannon, with a double-barreled gun, sat in front of the Monitor, who had charge of the helix. Chief Engineer Cowan was at the helm, and Sullivan, the volunteer fireman, when something like the following conversation ensued:

Lieut. Cannon—"It is now 9 o'clock. Shall we strike her?"

Pilot Cannon—"That is what we came for. I am ready."

Engineer Cowan—"Let us go on, then, and do it."

Sullivan, fireman—"I am with you, all, and waiting. Go ahead."

The boat was now put bow on, and aimed directly for the ironclad. As the little steamer started forward, the look-out on the ironclad hailed them with, "Take care, there; you will run into us. What steamer is that?" Lieut. Cannon replied, "The David, sir."

Lieut. Cannon, told him there was another Yankee, pointing to one with his body half by Cannon's side.

Cannon took care of him with the other barrel.

The next moment they had struck the ironclad, and exploded the torpedo about fifteen feet from the bow.

The explosion was so great, that the ironclad started forward, the look-out on the ironclad hailed them with, "Take care, there; you will run into us. What steamer is that?" Lieut. Cannon replied, "The David, sir."

The evidence for the prosecution is as follows:

Orrin Curtis, sworn—An agent of the Milwaukee & Prairie du Chien Railroad in this place, and an accomplice witness. We found a large number of tickets in Mr. Garrett's trunk. They are here (exhibiting them). They were found on Thursday night.

In the afternoon of that day, Mr. Whitney, my clerk, told me that two of my tickets not sold by me, had been shown him by Mr. Garrett. I went to Mr. Garrett and showed them to me. I then told Mr. Garrett that the tickets had been taken from my case and I believed he had done it. I told him I had found out where he had sold them, and wished him to sit down in my office and I would take an inventory of the tickets left, so that what was missing he should make up. He said he would do it. He had started for Chicago and was going on the boat that night. I replied, "You shall not go or leave the room until this is settled." He said I could inventory my case and if anything was missing, I would let him know in Chicago. I told him I would not let him go, but would arrest him if he did not sit down. He said he would stay if I did not take longer than ten minutes. He then got up, took his trunk, and went to the door. He was walking around the room for some time. He then said he was not going to stay all night, but should go and get some supper. I said, "You had better not leave." He went out, and when he had been gone a few minutes I sent officer Patterson to arrest him. Mr. Patterson came back in a little while and said he had lodged him in the calaboose, and asked me, "What will you give me to tell you where $200 worth of tickets are?" I said, "I will give you $200 if you tell me where they are." He then told me that they were in that trunk. We then opened the trunk and found the tickets therein, and made an inventory of them.

There were in all $221 worth taken. They had been kept in our case, behind the counter in my office. I was always kept busy. Some time since, during a temporary absence at St. Anthony, my clerk found that the case could be opened by sliding back the bolts of the door with a knife. I felt anxious about it then, and examined the case. I found that it had the appearance of having already been opened that way. The tickets inside were not stamped; the stamp had usually been left out at noon-times. These tickets have been left in my case as agent. Garrett was a runner for me outside.

I conversed with him about it. He said he had been persuaded to take these tickets by some other parties, and but for that would not have thought of it. He did not say who they were. He said he found the door unlocked once and took them all at one time, and stamped them at different times. I know the cost of printing these tickets, or what their value is, independent of their value as tickets.

Cross-examined.—These tickets were not stamped by me, or by any one in my authority. They are salable without being stamped. I always stamp these tickets. I did not stamp them. I have not issued any office. They were not stamped in the case some have been, and left in the case, being exchanged for others. We issue none without stamping them. They are charged to me at the rates I sell them, and are so accounted for. I estimate their value at the amount the Company orders me to sell them for or return them. A ticket not stamped is a genuine ticket. All these are. I cannot tell who stamped them. S. B. Forbes—Sworn—I am a railroad ticket agent. On the afternoon of the evening of Mr. Garrett's arrest, a man offered to sell me two X. Y. tickets, saying he had bought them. He offered them for $38, much below their value, and I bought them. I immediately went to Mr. Curtis's office, and asked Whitney how it was that tickets could be sold at such rates. Mr. Whitney looked at the tickets, compared them with their serial numbers, and said, "We never sold those tickets." I then said, that is suspicious of wrong work, and advised him to inventory his stock.

Garrett afterwards confessed to me that he had sold a few tickets, under advice from others. I do not know the man from whom I bought the tickets. It was done through my assistant, James Ruddy. The tickets are worth $16 in all.

Orrin Curtis re-called—I have not examined any books to see whether I sold these tickets or not. I gave a receipt for all the tickets I have sold, and I am responsible for them. I am afraid I will have to suffer their loss, as I gave bonds for their value at the company rates for fare. They were worth to me what I sold them for.

Chas. N. Hubbell, sworn—I know defendant. I returned to Mr. Curtis four tickets, I got them from Garrett. He gave me them the afternoon of the night he was arrested. He was going to leave town, and gave them to me to sell. I know nothing about the others. They were three in number. The other one I got from another party.

Here the prosecution rested their evidence, and there being no offer for the defense, Mr. British proceeded to address the Court.

MR. BRITISH'S ARGUMENT.

His client, he said, was charged with a heinous offense, it is true, but the crime of larceny cannot be proved by the evidence as given in this case. We hold that larceny as defined in the Statutes (reading them) cannot have been committed in the taking of these tickets, because they have no intrinsic value, and were not issued by any one having authority to do so. In New York it had been found necessary to pass a Statute expressly for this line of cases, leaving the inference that where there is no such Statute in force (as in this State), it is not larceny to take tickets in this manner. He cited instances from English law to sustain this position, tickets were not issued in a bona fide manner, hence were of no value. They were merely an evidence that the buyer has paid his fare—a receipt, in short, of passage money. Their intrinsic value is only a few cents—and it is not even charged in the complaint that he took certain printed pieces of paper of any specified value.

MR. HUME'S ARGUMENT.

The defendant, he said, had certainly committed a crime which was covered by the statutes. He had violated confidence, and ab-structing these tickets, stamped them, and disposed of $200 worth of them, and was to have been defrauded out of the amount. This is the act he is charged with. There had been no evidence put forward to palliate it. They have relied on the letter of the law, and that we give to them. The defendant is not charged in this complaint with stealing "pieces of paper," but "railroad tickets." They are to Mr. Curtis, valuable in a sum equal to what they are sold for, but to outsiders are not.

In reference to the jurisdiction of Judge Gilman in such cases, he said that in cases where the property stolen is alleged to be over $15 in value, he would not have such jurisdiction, and in this case the property is over that value. He should ask that the defendant be held to bail for his appearance.

Squire Gilman said that he thought the case involved questions which he thought he ought to hold the defendant to bail for his appearance at the District Court. He should therefore fix the sum at $7500.

Defendant's counsel objected to the amount, but the Justice declined to lower it, and Mr. Garrett was remanded to jail.

THE WEEKLY PRESS for this week is published this morning, and for sale in wrappers at the Press counting room; price five cents. This number is literally a feast of good tidings to press, it contains President Lincoln's reply to the Missouri Delegation; Rev. H. Ward Beecher's great speech in England; a complete account in detail of the battle of Gettysburg, in which the Minnesota First was so conspicuous a part; a full official report of the proceedings of Congressional General Conference of Minnesota; numerous letters from our many correspondents in different sections of the country, who are stirring up the country, who are stirring up the closing scenes at the recent Red Lake Indian Treaty, valuable editorials on subjects pertinent to the hour, and the usual amount of local news—altogether forming the very best paper to send to friends at the East, or in the interior of the State.

NEEDS INVESTIGATING.—The Chief of Police informed Mr. Curtis yesterday, that a plan was on foot to allow R. H. Garrett to escape "accidentally," while in the custody of a Policeman outside the jail on some pretense. The Sheriff has doubtless squelched any possibility of such a plot by this time.

Secondly,—don't it look nice for a policeman to counsel a person who has had some piece—five dollars. He then told me that they were in that trunk. We then opened the trunk and found the tickets therein, and made an inventory of them.

There were in all $221 worth taken. They had been kept in our case, behind the counter in my office. I was always kept busy. The Greatest Banquet of Modern Times.

Complimentary to Private Miles O'Reilly.

Slight Outbreak on the part of the Committee of Arrangements.

The New York Herald of the 20th announced the arrival of the Irish poet, private Miles O'Reilly, who had been imprisoned on Ellis Island, for publishing songs relating to the military operations before Charleston. He had been pardoned by the President, and came armed with a thirty days' furlough from General Gilmore.

The Herald announced that a supper would be given to him on Thursday evening, the 22d, and accordingly on Friday morning it publishes a lengthy account of the banquet, which is a very clever satire upon the public entertainments that are continually being given in Gotham.

The following was the text of the invitation.

The invitations issued by the committee read as follows:

Sir—We take pleasure in inviting you to be present as a guest, at your own expense, on the occasion of a banquet for Miles O'Reilly, who has been pardoned by the President, and came armed with a thirty days' furlough from General Gilmore.

The guests assembled promptly at half-past six, the list comprising the most distinguished citizens in the city. Tickets were issued for only three hundred but over six hundred had squeezed themselves in.

Everything was in readiness for the commencement of festivities when it was discovered that the committee of arrangements had neglected to appoint a sub-committee to invite Private Miles O'Reilly, the Guest of the Evening.

This was immediately remedied by the appointment of the sub-committee who started out in search of the Guest.

During their absence the supper was discussed, the cloth removed and Hon. James T. Brady commenced to make a speech.

His remarks were interrupted by the arrival of a member of the sub-committee, who announced that his associate had secured Private Miles O'Reilly and he would soon be with them.

This announcement was received with tumultuous applause. At the close of Mr. Brady's speech another member of the committee came in and explained that he had learned that Private O'Reilly had been overtaken some half-hour before by the associate who had previously returned, and that he had come there expecting to find the Guest of the Evening in the seat of honor.

The matter was annoying enough, but there could be no doubt that the other members of the sub-committee would soon be back and bring the Guest of the Evening with them.

This assurance satisfied the audience, more especially when it became known that one of the sub-committee had gone to the residence of Mr. James O'Reilly, in the Sixteenth ward, where Private Miles was awaiting his carriage.

More speeches were made and songs sung, each person announcing that private Miles O'Reilly was momentarily expected.

The allusions made to the Guest of the Evening, and regrets for his absence, this continued for a long time, when, we quote from the Herald account.

HIS PRESENT POSITION OF THE SUB-COMMITTEE.

Just at this moment volleys of cheers and joyful shouts from the staircase announced that the long expected and much talked of guest was approaching.

"Have you Miles O'Reilly with you?" shouted a burly Hibernian, throwing his way through the crowd and leaning over the staircase.

"We have James O'Reilly, his cousin," was the answer, "and Miles, he says, is much more than only that he is in plain clothes, so that you don't know him."

GREAT QUESTION OF THE DAY—ARE YOU MILES O'REILLY?

The confusion following this announcement was perfectly indescribable. Every man turned round to his neighbor, seized his elbow, looked square into his eyes, and asked eagerly, "Are you Private Miles O'Reilly?"

The question of every other person, and every person said "No" to everybody. Mr. Lako Clark said he had been all round the tables and couldn't see Miles anywhere. He asked that the sub-committee should be asked and never let go until they gave him up. (Hear, hear.) The more he thought of it the sorer he felt that they had sold the guest of the evening for a substitute to either Tilton or O'Reilly.

The committee collected themselves, Judases, and he was indignantly in favor of at once holding them personally responsible for the production of their friend.

(Immense applause, followed by the immediate institution of threatening demonstrations against the committee.)

Den Wood attempted to pacify matters by making a speech on "Peace." He was soon hissed down and the quarrel resumed, each member of the sub-committee claiming that it was the duty of the others to have invited the Guest of the Evening.

The banquet finally closed by resolving itself into a committee of the whole to go out and hunt up the missing hero.

The following letters were read on the occasion:

TELEGRAM FROM THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22, 1863.

Have to remain here watching my Cabinet. There might be a row in the ranks if I were away. Telegraphing not a good medium for stories, but have an excellent anecdote about you in this edition. Very cordially and respectfully, your friend, A. R. KIDDER.

Hon. C. D. Drake's Reply to the President.

VINDICATION OF THE RADICALS OF MISSOURI.

Gen. Schofield's Course Exposed.

To the Radical Union men of Missouri:

It becomes my duty as Chairman of the Delegation from Missouri, which recently visited the City of Washington, to confer with President Lincoln in regard to Missouri affairs, to lay before you his reply to the communications submitted by the Delegation to him; which reply is hereto subjoined. It came to my hands on the 19th inst., and would have been immediately published, but that I felt it incumbent on me to accompany its publication with some remarks; which I have not until now had time to prepare. My remarks will be such as seem to me justified by the occasion. They will be dictated by no spirit of disrespect toward the President, personally or otherwise.

A perusal of the President's letter will satisfy you that except a single point, for the present, to attain its objects, this will be a source of rejoicing to our adversaries, as it will be of regret to you, and to all men of unconditional loyalty in the country.

Nothing was more manifest to the Delegation while in Washington, than that the sympathies of the unconditional Union men of the whole body of such Union men, for the present, to attain its objects, this will be a source of rejoicing to our adversaries, as it will be of regret to you, and to all men of unconditional loyalty in the country.
